

Cheah Foong Chiew v Lembaga Jurutera Malaysia

COURT OF APPEAL (KUALA LUMPUR) — CIVIL APPEAL NO W-02-401
OF 1996

SHAIK DAUD, ABDUL MALEK AHMAD AND DENIS ONG JJCA

4 MAY 1999

Administrative Law — Remedies — Declaration — Jurisdiction of domestic tribunal — Application for declaration that domestic tribunal has no jurisdiction to hear charge — Disciplinary proceedings yet to commence — Whether court should intervene and decide on issue of jurisdiction — Whether application premature

The appellant was charged under the Registration of Engineers Rules 1972. Before the disciplinary proceedings could commenced, the appellant applied to the court to challenge the jurisdiction of the respondent to bring the charge against him. The issue was whether, on the facts, the court ought to intervene.

Held, dismissing the appeal:

- (1) The normal rule is not for the court to intervene but to allow the domestic tribunal to proceed and decide the matter, as a domestic tribunal can determine its own jurisdiction. It is for the applicant to raise the issue of jurisdiction before the tribunal itself (see p 113C-D); Government of Malaysia & Anor v Jagdis Singh [1987] 2 MLJ 185 and Rex v Fulham, Hammersmith and Kensington Rent Tribunal; ex p Zerek [1951] 2 KB 1 followed.
- (2) The appellant's application to the court is premature. It would be wrong for the courts to intervene at this stage as it would tantamount to restraining the respondent from hearing the charge against the appellant, and would pre-empt the respondent's right under the law to adjudicate the matter (see p 113F-G)

[Bahasa Malaysia summary]

Perayu telah dituduh di bawah Peraturan Pendaftaran Jurutera 1972. Sebelum prosiding disiplin boleh dimulakan, perayu telah memohon kepada mahkamah untuk mencabar bidang kuasa responden untuk membawa tuduhan terhadapnya. Isu adalah sama ada, di atas fakta, mahkamah patut mencelah.

Diputuskan, menolak rayuan:

- (1) Peraturan biasa adalah bukan untuk mahkamah mencelah tetapi membenarkan tribunal domestik untuk memulakan dan memutuskan perkara tersebut, oleh kerana suatu tribunal domestik boleh menentukan bidang kuasanya sendiri. Adalah terpujang kepada pemohon untuk membangkitkan isu mengenai bidang kuasa di hadapan tribunal itu sendiri (lihat ms 113C-D); Government of Malaysia & Anor v Jagdis Singh [1987] 2 MLJ 185 dan Rex v Fulham, Hammersmith & Kensington Rent Tribunal; ex p Zerek [1951] 2 KB 1 diikuti.

- A (2) Permohonan perayu kepada mahkamah adalah pramasa. Adalah salah bagi mahkamah untuk mencelah pada peringkat ini kerana ia akan terjumlah kepada menghalang responden daripada mendengar pertuduhan terhadap perayu, dan akan membelakangkan hak responden di bawah undang-undang untuk membicarakan perkara tersebut (lihat ms 113F–G).

F

Shaik Daud JCA (delivering judgment of the court): This is an appeal from the decision of the High Court which had, on 1 November 1996, dismissed an originating summons filed by the appellant.

G

The facts leading to this dismissal were that the appellant was a registered director engineer practising under the name of Sigoh Din Sdn Bhd, a body corporate of consulting engineers approved to practise as such under s 7A of the Registration of Engineers Act 1967 ('the said Act') by virtue of which the appellant was a registered engineer. The Ministry of Defence had awarded a contract to Sigoh Sdn Bhd to construct and complete an ammunition depot in Melaka. Due to some complaints lodged by the Ministry of Defence, the respondent, the Board of Engineers established under s 3 of the said Act, commenced disciplinary proceedings against the appellant. He was charged under r 25 of Part IV (Code of Professional Conduct) of the Registration of Engineers Rules 1972 which were made under s 26 of the said Act.

H

I

Before the disciplinary proceedings could commenced, the appellant applied to the court by originating summons seeking a declaration that the alleged contravention of the Registration of Engineers Rules 1972, based on circumstances and facts that took place prior to January 1987, would not enable the disciplinary action to be taken against the appellant under s 15 of the said Act. In addition, the appellant also sought a prohibitory injunction to prevent the respondent from investigating against the appellant.

The records also showed that earlier, the appellant applied for an interim injunction preventing the respondent from investigating against him until the completion of the proceedings. Another High Court granted the injunction ex parte but on an application by the respondent, the ex parte interim injunction was set aside.

The appeal before us is in fact on the question of jurisdiction of the respondent and their powers under s 15 of the said Act.

Now, it is common ground that the alleged misconduct of the appellant to be enquired into by the respondent occurred before 16 January 1987, the date of coming into force of the Registration of Engineers (Amendment) Act 1987 (Act A662) which amended the said Act. It is also common ground that the charge against the appellant to be enquired into by the respondent is under s 15(1) of the said Act prior to its amendment, which reads:

Subject to this section, the Board may order the cancellation of the registration of any Engineer under any of the following circumstances:

(g) if he is found by the Board to have contravened the Act. ...

Section 15(1) is to be found in Part IV of the said Act and it was amended by Act 662:

(g) if he is found by the Board to have contravened, or failed to comply with, this Act or any regulations made thereunder.

It was the contention of the learned counsel for the appellant in the High Court as well as before us that since the alleged act of the appellant for which he was charged before the respondent, was in respect of the provisions prior to amendment of the said Act, he could only be charged for offences under the said Act and not under any regulations which only came into effect by the amendment. As mentioned earlier, the appellant's challenge is on the jurisdiction of the respondent.

Learned counsel for the respondent argued that there is a distinction between the jurisdiction of the respondent and the evidence upon which the charge is to be based. He further contended that so far as the jurisdiction issue is concerned, there is a policy issue at stake. While he conceded that the courts have the powers to intervene, he questions whether the court should intervene at this stage of the proceedings on the issue of jurisdiction.

We agree with the contention of the learned counsel for the respondent that although the courts have the power to intervene, in the circumstances of this case, we should not intervene on the issue of jurisdiction. The correct principle on this is as laid down in Government of Malaysia & Anor v Jagdis Singh [1987] 2 MLJ 185. In that case, the respondent had received notices of additional assessment for income tax for the years 1979 to 1984 inclusive. The respondent's accountant wrote to the Department of Inland Revenue,

- A informing them of the respondent's desire to appeal against the additional assessments. However, the respondent filed a motion for an order of certiorari to quash the said notices of additional assessments on the grounds that the notices of assessments are based on conjecture and have been issued maliciously and as a vindictive act. The High Court granted the respondent's application. On appeal, however, the then Supreme Court allowed the appeal and held that:

- (1) the discretion is still with the courts to act by way of judicial review but where there is an appeal provision available to the applicant, certiorari should not normally issue unless there is shown a clear lack of jurisdiction or a blatant failure to perform some statutory duty or, in appropriate cases, a serious breach of principles of natural justice.

- C It is clear from this decision that as a matter of judicial policy, the normal rule is not for the court to intervene but to allow the domestic tribunal to proceed and decide the matter. It is clear that domestic tribunals can determine its own jurisdiction. It is for the applicant to raise the issue of jurisdiction before the tribunal itself which is capable of making a decision. In Rex v Fulham, Hammersmith and Kensington Rent Tribunal; ex p Zerek [1951] 2 KB 1, Devlin J at p 10 said:

- E In my opinion, the argument on behalf of the applicant is based on a misconception of what it is that a tribunal in cases such as this is doing. When, at the inception of an inquiry by a tribunal of limited jurisdiction, a challenge is made to their jurisdiction, the tribunal have to make up their minds whether they will act or not, and for that purpose, to arrive at some decision on whether they have jurisdiction or not.

- F Apart from the respondent's power to decide on their jurisdiction, under s 20 of the said Act, there is an appeal process, where the appellant can appeal to an Appeal Board chaired by a High Court judge. We are of the view that the appellant's application to the court, in the circumstances of this case, is premature. We feel that it would be wrong for the courts to intervene at this stage as it would tantamount to restraining the respondent from hearing the charge against the appellant, and would pre-empt the respondent's right under the law to adjudicate the matter. We are of the view that the learned judge was right when he said that it was premature for the court to injunct the respondent in exercising their powers. We therefore dismissed the appeal with costs and ordered the deposit to go to the account of costs.

H Appeal dismissed.
